

Jennifer Hill and her husband Chris own and operate MD-Hillbrook Sales and Service, a sales and auctioneering business based in Thurmont, MD. Together they manage/assist with several public sales across the United States and Canada. Connecting cattle via private treaty is another important element to their business. The sales business ties closely with Jennifer's passion for exhibition and competition. She and Chris maintain a very competitive show string of Black and Red Holsteins as well as the occasional Brown Swiss and have been part of 50+ All American nominees in the last 10 years.

Aside from the sales business, Jennifer is an integral part of her family's dairy farm, Glad-Ray Farm in Emmitsburg, MD. She is responsible for the heifer raising and breeding programs as well as assisting with milking. This century farm was recently nominated for the 2020 Beef Quality Assurance Award.

Jennifer has a Bachelors degree in Communications and a Minor in Marketing. She has worked in the print media field in various capacities since graduation.

She currently serves on the Board of Directors and the Executive Committee for the All-American Dairy Show. She served six years on the World Dairy Expo Exhibitors Committee and is a past Board of Director for the RWDCA.

Jennifer looks forward to serving Pennsylvania Holstein Association as the new show coordinator. Her passion and talent for showing, along with her experiences in and out of the ring make her a logical fit.
